A River Planter Sets an Example-Two Young Men Arrested for Oplum-Smoking.

Last Sunday night about 11 o'clock a darky called at the stationhouse armed with a double-barreled shotgun, a powderhorn and pouch of bullets, and said he had been hunted for three days for his life and been hunted for three days for his life and wanted to deliver himself up to the au-thorities. He said further that he had shot another darky named Henry Haw-kins, who interfered with him in his family affairs. He was very kindly accommo-dated with a strong cell and plenty of company, and was further obliged with a trial yesterday morning, his bail being kindly fixed at an amount beyond his capacity to give.

capacity to give. A warrant was sworn out against the darky, who gave his name as Adam Hawkins, and the case came up before Justice Quigley vesterday morning. The witnesses were all on Hawkins's side, and witnesses were all on Hawkins's side, and swore to a state of facts which made it appear that the action of the prisoner had been of the most flendish description and utterly unprovoked. Their testimony was that Adams met Hawkins on the river bank, opposite Brown & Jones's coal fleet, knocked him over the bead with a pistol, shoved bim over the builf, and as pistol, shoved bim over the built and pisto

CATCHING A COOK.

THE SUMMARY MANNER IN WHICH A CULINARY, AFTIST WAS THEATED.

Mr. James Swaringen, who lives on Bordeaux Island, has made an example of one of the class who hire themselves to persons living down the river in order to get free passage, jumping the beat before their destination is reached. A man cook was employed by Mr. Swaringen to go to Bordeaux Island and his passage paid to that place. When the boat reached body have the leftow got off, attracted by the sounds of mirth there, where a darky picnic was being held. Mr. Swaringen did not miss him until he arrived at Minon's, and when the boat touched at Austin on acharge of obtaining money under laise present of the cortes, and sontoned for six months, with three months added for the costs.
